Hogarth Sunday.

Dearest

Here is £15-6-6. with a thousand thanks.

I suppose you wouldn't like to dine on Wednesday to meet Nelly Cecil ? — no, of course you wouldn't.

Could I have the table some time, & the bill ?
Just off to my concert in my neat nigger brown costume & parrot hat.

I hope Angelica is all right.
I'm getting doubtful whether I shall have time to write the story called Monday or Tuesday — if not, I don't know what to call it the book.

Hogarth
Sunday,

Dearest,

Here is 15/ which I consider dirt cheap for the hat. / It is thought to be very becoming.

Would you possibly take me one day this week to buy an artist — or anyhow tell me where the shop is?

Our proposal about the woodcuts is that Gen & Duncan shd receive half profits, & produce as many woodcuts as wd make a little book, in time to be published in the Spring —

What about calling on Kate?

Adrian & Karin are here playing bridge.

Yr B

Please let me know what I owe for the table. Could it be sent? Also what measurement is right for your chair.

Our Sister-in-Law!
How old is she?

Merry Xmas.

A thousand thanks for Table.

I looked in to consult you about the Servants. Angelica is perfectly well & had a very good night. But this morning my Nelly gave me notice on the ground that we had too many people yesterday. I feel pretty certain that the real reason is that She & your Nelly have arranged that She is to offer to come to you. Lottie has not given notice & seems very depressed. This may be entirely fiers work on my part, & Nelly may only be in one of her usual states.
But she was very odd in her manner Evidently trying to rake up reasons for going, & I know that the & your Nelly have been having great Confabs.

I should very much like to know what you mean to do about it— of course I feel rather desperate as anyhow there will be ructions between her & Lottie—
O God what a nuisance it all is!
I expect you'll get a letter from N. tomorrow morning. Would you ring me up as early as you can; I dont want her to think that I'm completely hood winked.
But of course she'll change her mind a dozen times. I merely said that she had much better go if she thought the plan too hard. Lottie told me that they had so many rainy days that one hard day didn't matter — from which I gather that Nelly must have gone off on a line of her own.

Dearest

I opened this, thinking it was for the press. Please assure Miss Cowle that there's a troop of monkeys in the background.

I can't remember your address, so I send it to Charleston.

How is Julian getting on?
